5th GRADE SURVIVAL GUIDE FOR CREATING SUCCESSFUL WRITERS
What Teachers Look for in Writing
Intermediate (4-8)

Ideas . . .
• Make sense
• Get and hold my attention
• Have a main idea, thesis, center, sense of purpose
• Writer draws on experience
• Says something new, or says it in a fresh way
• Full of ideas that add interest and important information

KEY QUESTION: Did the writer stay focused and share original information or perspective about the topic?

Voice . . .
• Sounds like the person who writes it
• Sounds like a particular writer
• Writing has style, flavor
• Reaches out to me, the reader. Brings me “inside”
• Makes me feel...

KEY QUESTION: Would you keep reading this piece if it were longer? MUCH longer?

Sentence Fluency
• It’s smooth going – easy to the ear
• I could easily read this aloud
• Almost every sentence begins in a slightly different way, OR
• Repetition is rhythmic and stylistic, not annoying
• Some sentences are long. Some aren’t
• Sentences aren’t choppy. Yet they do not meander aimlessly as if length alone were a virtue and there were no particular need to rush to the end and be done with it

KEY QUESTION: Can you feel the words and phrases flow together as you read the passage?

Organization . . .
• The opening makes me want to keep reading
• Has a logical order or pattern (problem/solution, comparison-contrast, story unfolding over time, etc.)
• I can follow the story or main points
• Sometimes I can predict – sometimes the writer surprises me
• Ends well. Ties up loose ends. Doesn’t stop abruptly
• Doesn’t end with, “Then I woke up and it was all a dream!”
• Doesn’t repeat with, “Now you know the three reasons we should fight pollution.”

KEY QUESTION: Does the organizational structure enhance the ideas and make it easier to understand?

Word Choice . . .
• Makes me say, “Yes, that’s just the right word or phrase
• Long after reading, some words still tug at my memory
• Words are used correctly
• The writer chooses wisely, but isn’t afraid to stretch
• This writer knows the language of the topic – but doesn’t try to impress me with phony, bloated, phrases
• Use simple language if it gets the job done

KEY QUESTION: Do the words and phrases create vivid pictures and linger in your mind?

Conventions
• The writing is clean and polished. It looks proofread.
• Most things are done correctly.
• Careful, controlled use of conventions makes meaning clear and reading easy.
• No BIG erers shout at me frm the pg: Hey!” Pay attenSHUN two me! Fergt IDEAS and VOICE! Think ? abowt, the mistakes!, A lot!!”
• Spelling, punctuation, grammar, capital letters and paragraph indenting: This writer has thoughtfully attended to ALL conventional details.

KEY QUESTIONS: How much editing would have to be done to be ready to share with an outside audience?

Organization
Organization
the link to instruction

Any activity that allows students to practice . . .

• Writing a lead that hooks the reader

• Sequencing in a logical/interesting way

• Getting rid of “deadwood”

• Identifying the turning point

• Connecting ideas to a larger theme

• Linking ideas together for the reader

• Setting up a problem – then solving it

• Crafting a conclusion that ties up loose ends
GOOD ORGANIZATION

• Starts out with a bang!

• Everything ties together.

• It builds to the good parts.

• You can follow it easily.

• At the end it feels finished and makes you think.
SOME WAYS TO WRITE INTRODUCTIONS

Introductions establish the direction your writing is going to take. A good introduction grabs the readers attention and refuses to let go. But – what’s a good way to begin your writing?
Here are some suggestions:

OPEN WITH A QUESTION:
Have you ever wondered how you’d survive if you found yourself alone in the wilderness?

OPEN WITH AN ANNOUNCEMENT:
This is not a cookbook for the gourmet. These recipes are strictly for the cook on a tight budget.

OPEN WITH A BOLD AND CHALLENGING STATEMENT:
Contrary to what some people think, most of our learning takes place out of school.

OPEN WITH A BOLD AND CHALLENGING STATEMENT:
“You’re going to regret this.” That’s what my best friend Liza said as I got on the roller coaster.

OPEN WITH A RIDDLE OR A PUZZLE THAT THE READER CAN GRAPPLE WITH:
What textbook has no pages, is miles wide, smells like a creek, and has been around for millions of years? That’s right – Outdoor School.

OPEN WITH A PERSONAL EXPERIENCE:
I’m still glad I didn’t cry at the funeral, though I did in my room later.

OPEN WITH HOW YOU FELT:
My hands were sweaty? My teeth wouldn’t quit chattering. Prickly fingers ran up my spine. What would happen next?

SOME WAYS TO WRITE CONCLUSIONS

A conclusion brings your writing to resolution. It helps the reader tie up all loose ends, brings all the separate pieces together, and sometimes even predict the future or anticipates next steps. A good conclusion helps the reader feel or appreciate the importance of what she/he has just read, but it does NOT painstakingly tramp over old ground, re-making points the writer has already drummed into the reader’s head. A good conclusion is like a wise thought – it seems it was always there, inevitable, waiting – yet, the sound is new, fresh.

WHAT’S A GOOD WAY TO END YOUR WRITING?

CLOSE WITH A QUESTION THAT INVOLVES THE READER:
 Alfred decides that was the last time he’d ever go on a roundup. And who can blame him?

CLOSE WITH A STATEMENT ECHOING AN IDEA THAT THE STORY/WRITING HAS ALREADY HINTED AT:
 The award stated that Ms. Brown was the best teacher in the state – which was no surprise to anyone except, perhaps, Ms. Brown herself.

CLOSE WITH A HINT OF THINGS TO COME (ACTUALLY THE BEGINNING OF A NEW STORY, BURIED WITHIN THIS ONE):
 Julie thought she’d better get going. She had over 200 miles to travel, and it was growing dark.

CLOSE WITH A STATEMENT SHOWING THAT SOME THINGS NEVER WILL BE RESOLVED:
 We never did find out what happened to Mr. Bickle’s cat. Some things seemed destined to remain a mystery.

CLOSE WITH A PERSONAL COMMENT OR RESPONSE:
 Seeing a drop of water under a microscope makes a person look at a river with new eyes.

CLOSE WITH A STRONG STATEMENT SUGGESTING THE FINAL CONCLUSION YOU HOPE YOUR READER WILL DRAW:
 How teachers see their students makes all the difference in how students see themselves.
CLOSE WITH AN ENDING THAT LETS THE READER “FILL IN THE BLANKS” A LITTLE:
   If children were to stop watching television altogether who knows what the results might be.

   We watched Adam walk down the road until he became just a tiny speck and then disappeared altogether into the dust of twilight.

CLOSE WITH A FORCEFUL ARGUMENT, NUDGING THE READER IN A PARTICULAR DIRECTION:
   Cruelty to animals must be stopped now.

HINT: DO NOT close your paper or story by saying, “This has been a paper about…” Unless your reader dozed off, he/she already knows what you said. You must leave the reader something to think about. Close with a bang, not a whimper.

Any activity that allows students to practice . . .

- Helping writers feel safe/accepted
- Noting moments of voice in writing/pictures
- Valuing and requesting diversity
- Rewarding risk—even over success
- Providing opportunities to hear the voices of others
- Writing to someone (letters, posters)
- Asking students to write voice in ... or out
- Looking for Voice in advertising, print, and nonprint resources
INDIVIDUAL VOICE

• This really sounds like me!

• My reader can tell that I care about this topic.

• This is what I think

• I want you to read this and feel something.

• Aren’t my ideas really terrific?
Word Choice
Any activity that allows students to practice . . .

• Building vocabulary through reading – anything and everything

• Brainstorming: How else could you say it?

• Learning to use resources – traditional and electronic software

• Putting “tired” words to rest

• Playing with language, dialects, formal and informal word usage

• Building power in verbs

• Practicing precision – more for less
POWERFUL WORDS

• This is the best way to say this.
• I can picture it!
• My words are new ways to say everyday things.
• Listen to the power of my verbs.
• Some of the words linger in my mind.
• It is easy to read aloud.
I Love the Look of Words

Popcorn Leaps, popping from the floor of a hot black skillet and into my mouth. Black words leap, snapping from the white page, rushing into my eyes. Sliding into my brain which gobbles them the way my tongue and teeth chomp the buttered popcorn.

When I have stopped reading, ideas from the words stay stuck in my mind, like the sweet smell of butter perfuming my fingers long after the popcorn is finished.

I love the book and the look of words the weight of ideas that popped into my mind I love the tracks of new thinking in my mind.

VERBS WITH VERVE
Adapted from The Play of Words by Richard Lederer

Suppose you write

“No,” she said and left the room.

Grammatically, there is nothing wrong with this sentence. But because the verbs say and leave are among the most colorless and general in the English language, you have missed the opportunity to create a vivid word picture. Consider the alternatives:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SAID</th>
<th>LEFT</th>
</tr>

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>apologized</td>
<td>jabbered</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>asserted</td>
<td>minced</td>

<tr>
<td>boasted</td>
<td>shrieked</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>cackled</td>
<td>sighed</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>commanded</td>
<td>slurried</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>drawled</td>
<td>snapped</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>giggled</td>
<td>sobbed</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>goaded</td>
<td>whispered</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gurgled</td>
<td>whooped</td>
</tr>
<tr>

OTHERS?

If you had chosen from among these vivid verbs and had crafted the sentence ”No,” she sobbed and stumbled out of the room, you would have crafted a powerful picture of someone quite distraught.

Here are brief descriptions of twenty different people. Choosing from your two lists for said and left, fill in the blanks of the sentence.

“No,” s/he _____________________ and __________________ the room.

1. an angry person        11. an excited person
2. a baby                12. a frightened person
3. a braggart            13. a happy person
4. a child               14. someone in a hurry
5. a clown               15. an injured person
6. a confused person     16. a military officer
7. a cowboy/cowgirl      17. a sneaky person
8. someone crying        18. a timid person
9. a drunkard            19. a tired person
10. an embarrassed person 20. a witch
